BIPARTISAN ACTION

Although our state is the Great Lakes state and is surrounded by fresh water, Michigan residents continue to face a water crisis, and it is time to act.

On June 3, 2015, Representatives Sheldon Neeley, LaTanya Garrett, and Stephanie Chang convened a public hearing at the state capitol to hear testimony from Michiganders facing water shutoffs, contamination, and public health concerns.

A bipartisan group of Michigan lawmakers* formed a workgroup to partner with stakeholders to develop legislation to address Michigan's water crisis. The workgroup has introduced part of a package of bills because they believe that water is a human right.

We need to protect the residents of Detroit, Highland Park, Flint and all Michigan communities by making sure each resident has the right to safe, affordable and accessible water.
